

Gastroscopy (endoscopic exam of the stomach) reveals ulceration. Gastric ulcers are common in horses that train intensively, travel frequently, and compete. They can cause significant colic, poor appetite (particularly for grain), weight loss, poor performance, and irritability. Gastroscopy provides definitive diagnosis and allows evaluation of the horse's response to treatment.

